THE POWER OF EXPLORATION

---

Exploration is defined as the thorough examination of a subject or the action of exploring an unfamiliar area.

Career exploration specifically, is a process that helps collect information about yourself first, your career, and your current situation, to look into next steps.

This exercise is often overlooked and an unplanned transition may lead to various states like confusion, dissatisfaction, depression, anger, etc.

Understanding your value and assessing your unique situation are essential to help you see what options you have, evaluate which ones make sense, and make an informed decision.

Doing this exercise works best when you can dedicate time for research because a good plan is one strengthened with data and evidence.

The questions will also guide you to know what kind of information you should collect in a structured way. I highly recommend going through the career exploration form every few years as you evolve, grow, and your priorities change.

Remember, while you are filling out this form, that these are big titles. There are many ways to approach them as well as countless exercises, assessments, methods, and resources.

By the end of this activity, you will know exactly what you need to do to in terms of next steps in your career.

Take your career... one step further!

BONUS

Articulating your value will help you write stronger career documents and present better during interviews.

What is your personality type?

What are your values?

What are your motivated skills?

What are your strengths?

What are your interests?

What is your ideal work environment?

What are your limits? (contract types + schedules + compensation)

What is your definition of success?

What are your notes regarding labour market information, legislation, and work authorization requirements?

What are your options? (title/occupation + hours + compensation). Evaluate both knowledge & experience gaps, practicality, risk, and time-to-transition.

What is your action plan moving forward including your timeline?
